

CASTLE WAS NOT PLANNED TO FIT, SAYS MRS. GOULD

Architect Haydel Sketched Plans Sixty Feet Longer Than the Site She Said—Jury to Report Verdict To-Morrow.

(Special to The Evening World.)

MINEOLA, June 14.—Summing up the case for the defense in the suit of Architect Abner J. Haydel against Howard Gould for $60,000 for drawing plans of the never-built Castle Gould, Attorney Monfort admitted this afternoon that the issue lay entirely in what transpired at the famous interview in the Waldorf-Astoria. Justice Keogh interrupted his argument almost at the outset, changing his statement into a question involving whether or not the architect was insultingly dismissed.

Mrs. Gould was the last principal witness and spent a warm quarter of an hour on the stand, under cross-examination. She testified that Haydel's sketches were on one occasion a misfit, providing a replica of Kilkenny Castle sixty feet too long for the site. Another sketch, she said, resembled a French chateau more than an Irish castle. "Not at all," was her answer to the question if she was angry during the final disagreement with Haydel at the Waldorf-Astoria.

Howard Gould was the first witness today. He denied that his wife ever used profane language in his hearing.

The trial was resumed promptly at 9 o'clock. Ten minutes before that time Howard Gould, dressed in a summer suit of light blue goods, and his wife, formerly Katherine Clemmens, arrived in court.

Mrs. Gould took a seat between two of her lawyers, and while Lawyer Robert Thorne, for Architect Haydel, was cross-examining her husband she suggested questions to her lawyers. She appeared to be amused by the whole proceedings. Lawyer Thorne carried Mr. Gould over all of his negotiations with the architect.

The examination proceeded thus: Q. On April 15 you received a letter from Mr. Haydel saying that the drawings for the foundations were completed? A. Yes, and I wrote him that I didn't approve of them.

Q. Now, although Mr. Haydel had on two occasions asked you for $5,000 on account, is it not a fact that you only gave him $5,000 in all—$2,500 at one time and $2,500 again? A. Yes.

Q. On Oct. 10 you wrote to Haydel and told him to get the plans ready as soon as possible, so that you might let the contract by Dec. 1, and ground was broken as soon as the frost was out of the ground?

A. I meant the sketches. Q. But you couldn't let contracts on sketches? A. No, on working plans only.

Mrs. Gould denied again that his wife ever alluded to Haydel as a "d— architect."

"She never used profanity of any kind," he added. "Any statement to that effect is a deliberate lie."

Mrs. Gould Takes Stand. Mrs. Gould took the stand at 10:20 o'clock and declared that upon several occasions Haydel had apologized to her for his conduct.

Q. On the day that Haydel appeared at the Waldorf, what was his attitude? A. He was in a bad humor; he was trying to tell Mr. Gould very forcibly that he might hire another architect as soon as he was paid.

In his summing up the lawyer for the plaintiff said: "My friend has referred to the impetuosity of my client and to the cool attitude of Mr. Gould. Which of the two, weighing their characters, was the one who made a promise and then failed to keep it?"

The attack that Mr. Thorne made on Howard Gould's veracity created a sensation in court.

Sealed Verdict To-Morrow. Justice Keogh in his charge declared that there are certain customs in politics that must be observed, and that the whole case was based upon the fact that the plaintiff described at the Waldorf-Astoria and which defendant denied.

Justice Keogh said that the plaintiff, "was so humiliated, chagrined and insulted, he had a right to stay away from the room in a very disgraceful and insulting way, so that you felt chagrined and humiliated? What then?"

Attacks Gould's Veracity. In his summing up the lawyer for the plaintiff said: "My friend has referred to the impetuosity of my client and to the cool attitude of Mr. Gould. Which of the two, weighing their characters, was the one who made a promise and then failed to keep it?"

The attack that Mr. Thorne made on Howard Gould's veracity created a sensation in court.

Sealed Verdict To-Morrow. Justice Keogh in his charge declared that there are certain customs in politics that must be observed, and that the whole case was based upon the fact that the plaintiff described at the Waldorf-Astoria and which defendant denied.

Justice Keogh said that the plaintiff, "was so humiliated, chagrined and insulted, he had a right to stay away from the room in a very disgraceful and insulting way, so that you felt chagrined and humiliated? What then?"

Attacks Gould's Veracity. In his summing up the lawyer for the plaintiff said: "My friend has referred to the impetuosity of my client and to the cool attitude of Mr. Gould. Which of the two, weighing their characters, was the one who made a promise and then failed to keep it?"

WICKES KEEPS SILENT IN CASE OF BLACKMAIL

Indicted Lawyer's Friends Say He Is Victim of a Queer Mania.

According to lawyers familiar with the developments leading up to the indictment yesterday of Lawyer Thomas P. Wickes on a charge of attempted blackmail under the name of "Lewis Jarvis," the story of Wickes's schemes has not begun to be told. The District Attorney is in possession of the names of a score of persons to whom Wickes is alleged to have written over the name of Jarvis on various pretexts.

Evan Shelby, a lawyer, of No. 46 Cedar street, who was retained to get into communication with victims of the blackmail, said that Wickes had inserted an advertisement in the "Evening World" offering to do detective work of a private nature. One of his favorite schemes was to offer to loan money at very high interest. I could not say how much money he realized on this scheme. Some of his victims were women.

It appears that Wickes, on at least one occasion, when he won a suit for damages for a client collected additional recompense for the "services of Lewis Jarvis." His little black man—his friends call Jarvis—was a money-maker.

Wickes lives with his wife at No. 330 West Eighty-fifth street, an apartment house. He left there before seven o'clock yesterday, reaching his office at No. 82 Beaver street at eight o'clock. After a few moments there he left, announcing that he was going to consult with his counsel Job Hedges.

It is known that a great many letters have been received by persons signed by the mysterious "Lewis Jarvis." These letters, his friends say, have been sent broadcast by Wickes, he writing and giving advice to persons absolutely unknown to him, having seen their names in newspapers in connection with some case of interest.

Long Acted Strangely. One friend to-day said he had noticed for a couple of years that the former Assistant Corporation Counsel was not just himself. He said he acted queerly and seemed to be under a mental strain. At times, this friend said, he had been passed by Wickes without notice, and he had been scolded for it. He said he had been scolded for it.

How Exposure Came. The exposure of Wickes, who was formerly an Assistant Corporation Counsel, and a member of the Equitable Life Assurance Society; Thomas P. Ryan, the capitalist who heads the syndicate which took over James H. Hyde's 501 shares of Equitable stock, and other big men interested in the reorganization of the company were connected with the report of State Superintendent of Insurance Francis Hendricks.

He caused the arrest of Dr. Grinnell, in prison, and he then signed the "Jarvis" letters were written in that spirit. He had been scolded for it. He said he had been scolded for it.

When the suit of William S. Mahan for a decree of absolute divorce from his wife, Margaret, and her counter suit against him was tried before Justice Leventritt yesterday, William H. Wood, counsel for Mrs. Mahan, told the Court that he had no witnesses and suggested that the framed issues be withdrawn and the case sent to the Special Term.

Andrew J. Smith, counsel for the husband, would not consent, so the Justice ordered the jury to bring in a verdict. The case went to the jury at 4:45 o'clock. A sealed verdict will be handed in at 9 o'clock to-morrow morning.

When the suit of William S. Mahan for a decree of absolute divorce from his wife, Margaret, and her counter suit against him was tried before Justice Leventritt yesterday, William H. Wood, counsel for Mrs. Mahan, told the Court that he had no witnesses and suggested that the framed issues be withdrawn and the case sent to the Special Term.

Andrew J. Smith, counsel for the husband, would not consent, so the Justice ordered the jury to bring in a verdict. The case went to the jury at 4:45 o'clock. A sealed verdict will be handed in at 9 o'clock to-morrow morning.

When the suit of William S. Mahan for a decree of absolute divorce from his wife, Margaret, and her counter suit against him was tried before Justice Leventritt yesterday, William H. Wood, counsel for Mrs. Mahan, told the Court that he had no witnesses and suggested that the framed issues be withdrawn and the case sent to the Special Term.

Andrew J. Smith, counsel for the husband, would not consent, so the Justice ordered the jury to bring in a verdict. The case went to the jury at 4:45 o'clock. A sealed verdict will be handed in at 9 o'clock to-morrow morning.

When the suit of William S. Mahan for a decree of absolute divorce from his wife, Margaret, and her counter suit against him was tried before Justice Leventritt yesterday, William H. Wood, counsel for Mrs. Mahan, told the Court that he had no witnesses and suggested that the framed issues be withdrawn and the case sent to the Special Term.

Andrew J. Smith, counsel for the husband, would not consent, so the Justice ordered the jury to bring in a verdict. The case went to the jury at 4:45 o'clock. A sealed verdict will be handed in at 9 o'clock to-morrow morning.

When the suit of William S. Mahan for a decree of absolute divorce from his wife, Margaret, and her counter suit against him was tried before Justice Leventritt yesterday, William H. Wood, counsel for Mrs. Mahan, told the Court that he had no witnesses and suggested that the framed issues be withdrawn and the case sent to the Special Term.

Andrew J. Smith, counsel for the husband, would not consent, so the Justice ordered the jury to bring in a verdict. The case went to the jury at 4:45 o'clock. A sealed verdict will be handed in at 9 o'clock to-morrow morning.

When the suit of William S. Mahan for a decree of absolute divorce from his wife, Margaret, and her counter suit against him was tried before Justice Leventritt yesterday, William H. Wood, counsel for Mrs. Mahan, told the Court that he had no witnesses and suggested that the framed issues be withdrawn and the case sent to the Special Term.

Andrew J. Smith, counsel for the husband, would not consent, so the Justice ordered the jury to bring in a verdict. The case went to the jury at 4:45 o'clock. A sealed verdict will be handed in at 9 o'clock to-morrow morning.

When the suit of William S. Mahan for a decree of absolute divorce from his wife, Margaret, and her counter suit against him was tried before Justice Leventritt yesterday, William H. Wood, counsel for Mrs. Mahan, told the Court that he had no witnesses and suggested that the framed issues be withdrawn and the case sent to the Special Term.

Andrew J. Smith, counsel for the husband, would not consent, so the Justice ordered the jury to bring in a verdict. The case went to the jury at 4:45 o'clock. A sealed verdict will be handed in at 9 o'clock to-morrow morning.

When the suit of William S. Mahan for a decree of absolute divorce from his wife, Margaret, and her counter suit against him was tried before Justice Leventritt yesterday, William H. Wood, counsel for Mrs. Mahan, told the Court that he had no witnesses and suggested that the framed issues be withdrawn and the case sent to the Special Term.

Andrew J. Smith, counsel for the husband, would not consent, so the Justice ordered the jury to bring in a verdict. The case went to the jury at 4:45 o'clock. A sealed verdict will be handed in at 9 o'clock to-morrow morning.

When the suit of William S. Mahan for a decree of absolute divorce from his wife, Margaret, and her counter suit against him was tried before Justice Leventritt yesterday, William H. Wood, counsel for Mrs. Mahan, told the Court that he had no witnesses and suggested that the framed issues be withdrawn and the case sent to the Special Term.

Andrew J. Smith, counsel for the husband, would not consent, so the Justice ordered the jury to bring in a verdict. The case went to the jury at 4:45 o'clock. A sealed verdict will be handed in at 9 o'clock to-morrow morning.

CHILD-WIFE TELLS STORY TO JUDGE

Girl Who Married Real Estate Dealer Finelite Comes to Court Stylishly Dressed—Defendant Acts Nervous and Refuses to Talk.

When the case of Jacob Finelite, the wealthy retired real estate dealer, of No. 864 Lexington avenue, who is charged with abandonment by Lena Stark, whose mother says she is eleven years old, but whose brother says she is fourteen, came up in the Jefferson Market Court to-day, Magistrate Finn announced that it would be an absolutely private hearing and that nobody but the principals, their attorneys and witnesses would be admitted.

The charge made by Lena and her brother, who live at No. 106 West Ninety-seventh street, is that in January last Finelite, for whom the girl had been working as a sort of housekeeper, consented to marry her and did marry her in the saloon of a man named Hips on Webster avenue, Jersey City.

A Jewish marriage certificate—the wedding was performed by a rabbi—is the principal evidence against Finelite. Lena, the rabbi and others all testify to the ceremony having taken place.

Mrs. Finelite says she took the child away from Finelite after the ceremony and that when Finelite ceased to contribute to her support she had him arrested for abandonment.

Finitelle in his defense says he never saw the girl in his life and that the entire story is a fabrication.

Magistrate Finn heard enough of the story in court last week to determine him on the course he took to-day, one of absolute privacy in the hearing.

The child was in court long before the proceedings began. She wore a red hat and a long white coat that completely enveloped her form. She is a rather pretty Jewish girl and well developed for her age, whether it is eleven or fourteen.

To an Evening World reporter the child and her lawyer, Charles Firestone, told of an incident which, they alleged, occurred yesterday. The morning, they said, Lena got a letter, which had been sent to Station C, asking her to meet a friend at the Post-Office in the afternoon.

She went to the Post-Office, followed at a distance by her lawyer and her brother. When they got there, they saw Finelite and another man were waiting. As soon as they saw Finelite and the brother, they walked away. The brother tried to speak to him, but he says, Finelite jumped on a car and rode away.

Finitelle was in court and appeared very nervous. He declined to make any statement whatever. The only witness examined during the afternoon was a rabbi, who refused to make his name public, and the girl herself. Finelite's attorney asked him if it was merely an engagement certificate. The rabbi replied that it was a regular orthodox marriage certificate.

When the child was put on the stand she testified that she had been married to Finelite, as she called him, twice since her marriage. She had met him and sent some time with him, she said. On both occasions, she said, she had seen him sign any papers, as every time she did it would cost him money.

Magistrate Finn then adjourned the case until June 21 at eleven o'clock. Finitelle was paroled in the custody of his counsel.

Ignitions of Mr. Alexander and Mr. Hyde, and he requested the interview. It was said afterward that the conference was a very stormy one, with Mr. Tarrill challenging the new owners of the society to oust him. It is well known that Tarrill has long been organizing the agency force to meet the present contingency and that his friends have been working to have him take the agency force with him if he "goes out."

At the conclusion of the meeting Mr. Morton would only discuss what had been actually done. Of this he said: "You know, I am not a man to put into effect. In fact, nothing has been done to-day save to elect me a member of the committee. The committee has decided to wait until the meeting of the new trustees."

"Have you consented the resignations of the executive officers?" "No, I have not and I shall not until I have heard from Mr. Hendricks."

"I have heard from the meeting of the new trustees?" "No, I have not and I shall not until I have heard from Mr. Hendricks."

"You say that your name was added to the list of the names of the Executive Committee. Does that mean that you were made Chairman of the Committee?" "No, Mr. Hyde is the Chairman of the Executive Committee as it is now formed."

The report was that Mr. Hendricks would suspend the license of the Equitable to do business in this State and recommend a further investigation to decide the fitness of the society under present conditions to continue in business at all. It was admitted by Mr. Morton's secretary that such a report had reached him.

Hendricks Refuses to Talk. When Superintendent Hendricks was asked about the matter this afternoon he said: "I have nothing to say."

Mr. Hendricks admitted that he would have the power to suspend the license of the Equitable to do business in this State, but would say nothing further on the matter.

Discussion of this report overshadowed everything else at the meeting of the Executive Committee in the office of President James W. Alexander, in the Equitable Building to-day.

Even the reorganization movement, which included the reduction of the number of directors from twelve to eight members and action on the resignations of the directors, was postponed. Presidents Hyde and Tarrill were placed in Mr. Morton's Vice-presidential chair.

Mr. Morton was one of the first to hear of it, and before the committee had been in session very long the story was all over the Equitable Building. Hendricks's report is expected by Saturday at the latest, although there is a possibility that it may go over into next week.

Mr. Wick, who has resigned, and Mr. Wheeler, who is ill, were the only absences at the meeting to-day. Before entering the meeting Mr. Morton and Mr. Hyde had a conference in the room of George E. Tarrill in a room in the Mutual Life Building, on Nassau street.

Mr. Tarrill had heard that to-day the Executive Committee was going to accept his resignation, as well as the resignation of Mr. Wick.

SEND POSTAL TO-NIGHT For Circular and Views of EAST ELMHURST, N.Y. City on the Hills at Picturesque Flushing Bay. THE IDEAL PLACE TO LIVE. Half Hour from Herald Square. Each lot has water front privileges. Bankers Land & Mortgage Corp. 811 MANHATTAN AVE., BROOKLYN.

NORDICA'S PLEA TO MAGISTRATE FOR CHAUFFEUR

The Diva Tries to Save Her Auto Driver, but He Must Stand Trial.

Louis Durasel, twenty-four years old, of No. 22 West Thirty-eighth street, who said he was chauffeur to Mme. Lillian Nordica, was held by Magistrate Finn, sitting in the Jefferson Market Court, to-day in 100 bail for trial in the Court of Special Sessions, on a charge of speeding an automobile on Seventh avenue, between Thirty-seventh and Fortieth streets, at a rate above the legal limit.

Durasel was arrested by Policeman Renneisler, of the West Thirtieth street station, who told the court that he had to-day followed the machine, a big olive green touring car, and had timed it three short blocks in an hour.

At the time of the arrest, which was about 20 miles an hour, the machine was in the hands of the young man's employer, Mme. Nordica, with her sister, and they accompanied the policeman to the Jefferson Market Court, where the chauffeur was arraigned.

Durasel, when brought before the Magistrate, pleaded not guilty. The policeman told his story and Magistrate Finn was about to hold him, when Mme. Nordica stepped to the bridge.

She was clad in a light, cream-colored pongee silk gown, with white straw hat trimmed with feathers, and with white veil and shoes. A pearl necklace was about her neck, from which hung a diamond pendant, while earrings of diamonds were in her ears.

"May I address the Court?" she asked as she stepped timidly up to the magistrate's desk.

"Proceed," replied the Court. "Well," continued the diva, "I am the owner of the automobile which this young man was operating, and he was in my car at the time. I have been going up and down the avenue every day for some time, and I am always careful that the speed laws are not infringed. This morning I was especially careful, for my horn on the machine was broken, and I had this dog whistle, which I blow when necessary required it was used. The street was crowded and we were going slowly. I am sure that the officer's watch was wrong."

"I am sorry," replied the Court, "but I will have to hold the prisoner for trial. I will make the bail light, however, so you may understand," said the alderman, "what do I do?"

"You must furnish bail to that amount. The young man will be arraigned in the Court of Special Sessions tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock."

"No, you can either give real estate or personal property."

Mme. Nordica then furnished bail, offering personal and household furniture as a pledge for the bail. She was in the Court of Special Sessions, 121 Madison avenue, which was accepted.

When the bail bond had been signed Mme. Nordica turned to the Magistrate and said: "Does it never happen that the automobile is in the right?" she asked.

"Sometimes," replied the Magistrate. "Well, I am sure that this is one of those times when the law is too severe. Why, he took us to the wrong police station. I think that the speed laws are good things and I obey them when I am riding."

Mme. Nordica then left the courtroom with her chauffeur and proceeded in the automobile on her trip.

Tailor Shops 110 Fifth Avenue. Atterbury System Clothes. are on well dressed men only; for no man can wear them and not be well dressed since they're a hand-made product. They're equal to the best custom tailor's best at about half his price.

"Ask the Man Who Wears Them" Quaker Gray or new Naples Blue Suits, right in every way. Prices range from $20 to $45.

Sole Agent LAMBERT. Salesrooms 39 & 41. Also at. 39 & 41. New Haven. New York City. Connecticut.

Henry Esders. Outfitters to Man and Boy. Suits For Your Boy. OUTING SUITS for robust, hearty boys with tasteful particular mothers.

Our suits are thoroughly made and less liable to rip or fade than those you'll find elsewhere. As manufacturers of our boys' suits, you can readily see that we look out for that in the material and making.

TWO-PIECE SUIT, single or double breasted, of fancy flannel, gray and brown mixtures, of Scotch hosiery, all wool, season well-finished, double-breasted, with cuffs and belt loops. $4.50.

TWO-PIECE SUIT, single or double breasted, of blue serge, fancy flannel, gray and brown mixtures, of Scotch hosiery, all wool, season well-finished, double-breasted, with cuffs and belt loops. $6 to $8.

YOUTH'S WASHABLE VESTS—A pretty assortment of white and fancy patterns; also fancy cloth vests in wool and silk mixtures. 95c to $2.50.

53 to 59 West 14th Street, near 6th Avenue.

STARIN HITS SCHOONER IN DENSE FOG

Steamer Bound for This City Stove Hole in Craft on the Sound.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., June 14.—The schooner Mary E. Suydam, of Canale, L. I., put into this port to-day, and her master, Capt. Fred B. Smith, reported that his craft was in collision with the steamer John H. Starin early to-day, about a mile south of Penfield Reef light.

The steamer apparently was not damaged, while the schooner was stove in about the forelegging on the starboard side, but above the water line.

According to Capt. Smith there was a thick fog at the time. The signals on the light were not picked up, but Capt. Smith says he heard the Starin's fog horn and altered his course to keep out of her way.

This brought the two vessels together, the Starin hitting the small coaster and hooking her fast for some minutes.

Smith, finding that his craft was not making water, told the Starin's master that he would make Bridgeport harbor, which he did.

The Starin resumed her course for New York, she having sailed from New Haven.

Le Boutillier Bros. Women's Suits. At Reduced Prices.

Women's Cloth and Silk Suits—Blacks and Colors—Homespun checks, etc., New Eton and Long Coat—$15.00. Value $22.00.

Women's Taffeta Silk Shirt Waist Suits—plain and fancy silks—$10.00. Value $16.50.

Women's separate Walking Skirts—mohair and light-weight wool materials—$5.90. Value $10.00.

Women's White Linen Wash Skirts—$2.98 and $3.98. Values $6.00 and $7.00.

Le Boutillier Bros. West 23rd Street.

Wash Shirt Waists. Thursday, June 15th.

In Lawn trimmed with embroidery, at 98c., $2.50, $2.95, $3.75.

In Batiste, trimmed with Val. lace, $4.75.

Lord & Taylor, Broadway and Twentieth Street, 14th Avenue, Nineteenth Street.

PUSHED COGWHEEL IN BABE'S THROAT. Little One Died as Result of Tiny Sister's Odd Mischievous Frank.

Josephine Vecco, two years old, was playing to-day with her fourteen-day-old brother Frank, at their home No. 88 Jackson street, West New York, N. J., when she got hold of a small brass clock wheel and pushed it down into the baby's throat.

The baby became black in the face and the little girl, frightened by the appearance of the infant, screamed for her mother. Dr. Shenier was summoned and after an hour's work, succeeded in getting the wheel out of the little one's throat, but the baby soon afterward died.

SWEDISH MINISTER AT PARIS IS DEAD. PARIS, June 14.—H. Akerman, the Swedish Minister here, died last night.

New Dining Car Service. ON THE New Jersey Central Reading Route. BETWEEN New York and Philadelphia. IN EITHER DIRECTION.

7 a.m.—A La Carte Breakfast. 8 a.m.—A La Carte Breakfast. 12 noon—A La Carte Lunch. 1 p.m.—A La Carte Lunch. 5 p.m.—Table d'Hôte Dinner, $1. Train Every Hour and on the Hour.

LITTLE THOUGHTS OF HOME. BUFFET CHINA CLOSETS. Not a season passes but some new creation to beautify the home is found in our salesrooms. We are constantly on the alert for novelties that are attractive but not costly.

In evidence, think of this handsome leaded glass Buffet China Closet, admired by all lovers of the home beautiful.

The price appeals to the homemaker. This indeed a chance to finish off your next dining-room at a small expense. J. H. Little & Co., Sixth Ave., Cor. 15th St.

OCULISTS. Not Counter Service here, but best professional treatment—i. e., an Oculist to examine and prescribe; an Optician to make and fit the glasses. Our Examining Rooms are commodious and contain fullest scientific equipment. Accuracy is made doubly certain.

N. CHARGE except for glasses, and that moderate. OUR FIFTH OPTICAL STORE. 350 6th Av. 22d St. SOON OPEN. J. Ehrlich & Sons. Oculists and Opticians, 48 years practicing. 223 Sixth Ave. 1345 Broadway. Near 15th St. West side St. Downtown 121 Broadway, Astor House. 35 Broadway Street Arcade.

CANDY. SPECIAL FOR WEDNESDAY. Butter Scotch, Chocolate and Nut Wafers, 10c. Lb. 10c. Chocolate—Covered Coffee, 15c. Walnut, 15c. Lb. 15c. SPECIAL FOR THURSDAY. Walnut Cream Kisses, 10c. Lb. 10c. Chocolate—Covered Fig Marshmallows, 15c. Lb. 15c. 54 BARCLAY ST. COR. 12th ST. COR. CHURCH. HELP WANTED—FEMALE. WANTED—A good respectable white woman for housework in family of two; must be good clean cook & dresser; can go every night; hours 7:30 a.m. to 8 p.m. good salary. Apply 8 to 11 Thursday, Miles Roadway, 2nd Fl. 11th St.